

Chino Valley

Community Profile

Prepared by the ARIZONA DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

Chino Valley is the site of the first Territorial Capital of Arizona. U.S. Army Cavalry Lt. Amiel W. Whipple gave the community its name while traveling through the area. "Chino" is the Mexican name for the abundant, curly, grama grass growing in the area. For many years Chino Valley farmers have grown corn and alfalfa, and raised cattle. The capital moved to the town of Prescott, 15 miles south in 1864. A narrow-gauge branch of the United Verde and Pacific Railroad was completed to Jerome in 1895. This joined the Prescott and Arizona Central, and established the Jerome Junction. Between 1900 and 1925, the activities of Jerome Junction were absorbed by Chino Valley.
